ABOUT THE WIRED ENSEMBLE

Two concurrent streams comprise the Wired Ensemble course at Olin:

- composition and performance of original works for instruments and voices
- exploration of music through written and oral communication.

As composers and performers, students concentrate on instruments, voices, and the symbolic language that brings them to life. They compose music for every family of instruments (woodwinds, brass, strings, percussion), as well as voice and spoken word. The course features biweekly performances of original compositions by fellow musicians. Students also have the opportunity to hear their works performed in concert settings by student musicians with whom they have collaborated.

Seminar trips to Boston and New York enable the class to gather musical and inspirational material, in addition to hearing some of the finest orchestral and vocal ensembles in performance. While actively engaged in composition and performance—all geared to an end-of-term production—students examine the worlds of earlier composers, thus providing context for their own lives and work.
